Let Nature Be Your Teacher

Wordsworth borders Mundell Park, one of several beautiful parks at Wesbrook Village that are named after UBC's Nobel Prize-winning scholars. Here, tranquil water features, green spaces, playgrounds and gathering plazas set the scene for nature-inspired charm. Designed by acclaimed architect Walter Francl, Wordsworth consists of a 16-storey high-rise and a collection of concrete cityhomes. This inspiring community is an invitation to experience modern living in a soothing setting, with many residences offering views of the Salish Sea, the North Shore Mountains or surrounding parks.

Look Deep Into Nature

Just a 20-minute drive from downtown Vancouver or Richmond, Wesbrook Village has earned a reputation as a vibrant addition to the established Point Grey neighbourhood. Daily conveniences, cafés and restaurants are readily accessible day and night. Tree-lined streets and manicured greenways weave throughout the community, forming a stunning backdrop for leisurely strolls or bicycle rides. To connect with nature, Pacific Spirit Regional Park is right next door, with over 2,000 acres of mighty evergreen trees and 73 kilometres of walking trails.

The Wesbrook Community Centre is a central hub where residents drop by for a workout or a game of basketball. Steps away, University Hill Secondary School, one of the top-ranking public schools in the province, offers a great place for teenagers to learn and grow. Other excellent secondary and elementary school options are also available nearby.

Events and celebrations are held all year-round at Wesbrook Village and the UBC campus, and an array of sophisticated cultural and recreational venues such as the Chan Centre for the Performing Arts, Museum of Anthropology and UBC Botanical Garden take weekend activities to a whole new level.
