The Next Level of Living

"What about a building of penthouses? That was the creative starting point: To curate a collection of extraordinary homes from artists who share the same uncompromising philosophy for approaching design with a clarity of purpose."

Maximising Minimalism

"I have a reverence for simplicity in design, to make every line count. The process is driven by distillation : The continual layering and editing of influences and ideas, governed by the timeless elegance of economy — just as we find in nature."

— Steve McFarlane, Office of McFarlane Biggar

The Complexity of Simplicity

1. 22 gauge steel, pre-formed and pre-painted metal panels with varied profiles to create a corrugated texture cladding the entire building
2. Angular floor-to-ceiling double glazing for subtle animation of the facade through changing reflections (over the course of the day)
3. Front-mounted tempered glass panels with an extruded aluminium frame and a graphic frit to obscure the slab sledge
4. Deep balconies and roof overhangs to minimize solar gain from the westerly sun
5. Pressure treated western red cedar soffits
6. Cast-in-place architectural concrete

Beyond the Rectangle

Form follows function. We re-imagined the floorplate beyond the typical four corners simply by prioritising livability above all else.

Life in Comfort

"Instead of providing multiple choices for every finish, we selected woods and stones that best harmonized with the architectural style. It's a timeless palette with the warmth of the West Coast sensibility added in to provide a quietly elegant backdrop for a life in comfort."

— Michelle Biggar, Office of McFarlane Biggar
